MATCHING GIFTS FUND COMPUTER CENTER FOR LAW STUDENTS

DAYTON, Ohio, April 3, 1987 -- Two matching gifts of $5,000 each will fund a student computer center for the University of Dayton School of Law.

The Hubert A. and Gladys C. Estabrook Charitable Trust and Hubert A. Estabrook, Jr., have provided the gifts to establish the Estabrook Computer-Assisted Learning Center, to be housed in the Law Library.

The Estabrook Charitable Trust is managed by John O. Henry, partner of the former Estabrook, Finn & McKee firm and, since a 1983 merger, partner of Porter, Wright, Morris & Arthur.

Hubert A. Estabrook was a founding partner of the Dayton-area law firm of Estabrook, Finn & McKee. The trust was established following his death in 1977. Since 1983, the University of Dayton School of Law has received $35,000 from the trust to fund the Law Clinic, student scholarships, and now the Computer Center. Hubert A. Estabrook, Jr., son of the trust's founders, has assisted with gifts to match the trust's support of both the Law Clinic and the Computer Center.

Students will be able to use the computers to compile bibliographies, store research notes, and write papers. The School of Law is also purchasing software for computer-assisted learning programs designed to teach both substantive law and such techniques as interviewing and negotiation.

The faculty of the School of Law strongly supports the addition of the computer center and has contributed more than $1,000 to the center's funding.

For more information about the gifts or the center, call Richard Ferguson, director of admissions and development for the School of Law, at 229-3555.
